

Why Have We Been Spending So Much Time In That London?

Yesterday saw us have another good meeting in London, we felt your prayers with us in very tangible ways both as we journeyed therein with the welcome we received from our hosts and the discussions that took place.

Those of you that spend time on Twitter can not have failed to notice that in the last few months we have been travelling to London for meetings, meetings that we have been requesting your prayers for, meetings that are tentative and delicate, that require us by their very nature to be quite secretive about at what are still the early stages.

What we can tell you is that we started this particular part of our journey when thinking about our plans for Christmas.<http://www.disabilityandjesus.org.uk/christmas/> As a result of these discussions we find ourselves having to think bigger and wider than our original plan.

Again we cannot say too much at this stage but even though the situation is something we can say little about at this stage we still feel in need of your help and support and more than anything your prayer, prayer that has been at the route of our whole journey together over the last three years.

We are not looking for ideas, what we are asking for is confirmation. We know that we are asking you in some ways to work in the dark, with little information but if you want to know what that is like talk to Dave and Jarvis and they will try to explain.

Maybe you would consider being part of a dedicated prayer team that would take on regular intercession for the work of Disability and Jesus?

Maybe the prayers you have already been offering for us have revealed some insights you'd like to share with us?

What we do know is that even though some things must remain confidential for now, we are on a pilgrimage together, all of us that make up the community that is becoming Disability and Jesus and as much as we can we want you to feel like you are at the heart of things, that what we have is mutual and interdependent.

What we do know is that it is only as we walk together holding each other up, I lean on you at times and at times you lean on me.

We are simply inviting folk to walk with us, don't ask what the plan is or where we are going cos we simply don't know. What is important is the journeying together rather than the destination.
