Plans changed drastically upon arrival as we appeared to be double booked as there was a ceilidh in full swing.

As you can imagine this narrowed down the areas of the estate that we were able to investigate.

Fortunately we had access to a building separate from the main house.

They called it the demonstration room.

Upon entering the building it had an immediate unnaturally cold feeling to it.

The building itself appeared to have been used as a learning facility for the post mortem of animals.

The seats were positioned in the traditional arced manner and in height looking down at the centre stage area where the dissection would have taken place.

We took the baseline readings and there was nothing unusual to report.

The room was a bit freaky given the fact that there was a heater on and there was plenty of old wooden floorboards exposed etc.

As we were preparing some of the equipment I caught movement from the corner of my eye.

It looked like a tall dark figure but I could not be any more descriptive as it was barely a glimpse that I caught.

Just at that point Lorraine could hear a female voice from the next room and Dez could hear talking too but there was no one physically there.

We tried to replicate this by stepping outside and talking loudly but the voices were not heard from where we were stood inside.

Maryann got the impression of the infamous grave robbers Burke and Hare. Perhaps they were involved with some illegal late night drop off's here at some point?

Lights off and infrared cameras on, we decided to see if we could record any anomalous activity while we were sat in a group.

Maryann sensed the spirit of a man that would have been a sailor but he did not interact with us so we were unable to get anything more.

We decided to conduct an EVP session.

Once we had started, we could hear what sounded like someone walking around the observation benches above us.

Maryann said that she could see a man sat in the middle of the observation arena but could not make him out clearly.

As we investigated he disappeared and we could not find a source that may have caused a noise similar to footsteps although there was some creaking so perhaps it was just that.

We then spaced ourselves out around the arena. I was stood at ground level and was sure that Alec was stood at the back of the arena but in fact he was stood elsewhere.

Later in the night both Dez and Maryann both witnessed the same phenomena but the figure was stood at a different area of the arena.

The name David Gibson kept coming to the forefront of my mind so Lorraine noted it just in case Maryann also identified the same name.

I could feel a spirit presence stood near me and most of the group seemed to notice that my facial appearance appeared to show the faint impression of someone else perhaps stood in front of me.

They described the face as being a bit more rounded in shape and was slightly deformed in appearance.

We could hear a dragging sound then Alec said he felt as if someone had said to him "don't try me".

A startled expression crossed Ian's face as he witnessed the strap from one of the teams bags move up then drop down of its own accord.

There seemed to be plenty of movement in the room a quick glances of something then nothing so our best guess was that something was messing about with us and was not giving us much more to go on so we decided to take a break and check in with the staff to see if we were able to move on to the second area which was available to us which was the lab.

There was nothing much to note spiritually here so we moved onto the dissection room.

Dez said that he felt a military connection with this room. He thought the room may have been used as a mess hall at one point. He was felt a connection with the plague here.

As we were stood in the room the door to the toilets appeared to open by itself but this happened a few times and we detected a breeze coming from the other door so we believe it was a natural effect caused by the air flow.

Dez noted that there was some military memorabilia placed around the room so perhaps subconsciously he associated it with the connection he made earlier.

Maryann felt a connection with a TB outbreak here.

Dez and Lorraine heard very loud footsteps coming from the bar area but no one was physically there.

Maryann and Dez both stated that they could see a shadow under the toilet door which moved as if someone was standing it but once again no one was physically there.

Dez then witnessed a shadow dart upstairs but again nothing spiritually or physically identified.

It definitely felt like we were being toyed with so we moved onto the last location that we had available to us that evening which was the basement.

Other than some very interesting artwork there was not much to report here so we decided to call it a night and pack up the equipment and head for home.
