Maryann: Sensitive

We were asked to investigate this property as a matter of urgency as the owner was now sleeping on the couch to avoid the bedroom where the reported activity was occurring. The owner was experiencing a huge mist from in her bedroom and was quite frightened by it.

Initially we took the baseline tests which registered as normal with the exception of the stairs, which gave a brief rogue energy reading of 2 milligauss which we could not explain.

While taking the readings in the bedroom it became hugely apparent that there was a very large energy reading which was emanating across the right side of the bed at pillow height. Further investigations prove that the high readings were coming from a touch lamp sat next to the bed.

It was emitting a huge energy leak and the owner would have been lying in it for long periods of time. Exposure to a high EM field for any great length of time could cause headaches and also potentially cause hallucinations, both auditory and visually.

Unfortunately we never witnessed the mist appear that night ourselves but did say to the owner that it could be the lamp which was causing this phenomena as she may have been subject to hallucinations.

The owner plans to remove the lamp and see how she gets on.

We also suggested the use of white sage in the room to help cleanse it from any unwanted energy. In our experience this seems to help clear the room of any unwanted energy.

I believe that the scientific reasoning behind this may be that the smoke disrupts the spirit energy that it resonates on. It seems to have worked for other people in a similar position so we suggested using this to help take control of their living space.

In regards to spiritual activity... I had picked up the name Henry. He had an affection towards the owner of the house.

I felt he would have went to the owner for help or assistance in the past and was grateful that she was there for him as he passed so he was not alone. It was never forgotten and he is watching over her ensuring no harm comes to her. Almost like a guardian angel in effect. The owner could relate to that.

Maryann sensed a pair of twins and that never made it into adulthood. She also sensed the name Charles that related directly to the family. Both of these were validated by the owner at the time.

We tried a few EVP experiments that unfortunately yielded nothing.

We also locked off a couple of rooms.

One filming the owners bedroom and the other, the spare bedroom which is where Maryann had sensed the twins. We left the Buddha head as a trigger object in the room, in the hope that the kids may wish to interact with it.

Nothing unusual was recorded on the lock off footage.

A ley line was also detected running through the edge of the property but unfortunately there was little else that we could detect here.
