

FOSSILIEN

Seelilie

Fisch

Wirbel mit
Haizahn

A photograph of a fossilized fern frond preserved on a rock slab. The frond is divided into a rachis (central axis) and numerous pinnules (leaflets). The pinnules are elongated and have a distinct, wavy, ribbed texture. The fossil is light brown and stands out against the darker, greyish-brown rock matrix. The rock slab is irregularly shaped and shows some surface texture and small cracks. The background is a solid dark blue color.

Farn

Saurierzähne

Schneckenplatte

ENDE